SUGGESTIONS

- On the limestone side of la Colombette, Syrah has found the perfect soil to express itself. It often reaches an exceptional level of maturity. It is at this time of ripening that it gains all of its aromatic power. It is vinified at a low temperature to preserve its fruit qualities and its finesse.
- This southern variety has a short strong trunk, and strong branches which help to resist the northern winds ; the Tramontane and the Mistral. It is also well adapted to dry conditions.
- When vinifying, we « bleed » the grapes from the oldest vines and we press the grapes from the youngest. After settling, the must ferments at a low temperature and the wine is left on the lees until bottled.
